Introduction

- Our training courses are designed for people who are looking for more knowledge and understanding of mental health. We provide half-day awareness courses, along with more detailed one and two-day courses.
- Our two-day courses qualify you as a Mental Health First Aider and our one day courses train you as an MHFA Champion. Both are delivered in partnership with My White Dog, Instructor Members with MHFA England. Our half-day Mind awareness courses are CPD certified and delivered by experienced Wiltshire Mind trainers.
- Our partners kindly deliver courses for us at a discounted rate so that we can offer them to people in our community at a lower cost than market rate, whilst also raising much needed funds to deliver our mental health support services, such as counselling and peer support groups.
- Courses can be booked by groups of 8 – 12 people, and allows for some tailoring of the course agenda to suit your groups needs. These courses are suitable both for organisations or groups of individuals who have similar needs (e.g. self-employed people, parents etc). Please note, if you have less than 8 delegates, it might be more cost effective to attend an open course. This will be attended by other members of the public and therefore no tailored facilitation will be possible. Please see the Group Courses section for further information.
- We also run Mental Health First Aid open courses which can be booked by individuals. Attendance is limited to 12 people per course to ensure you are kept safe and supported whilst you learn. Please see the Open Courses section for further information and check our website for details of future course dates.

Mental Health in the Workplace

Some employees may feel unable to talk about their mental health at work due to perceived stigma and fear of being judged. By creating a culture of support within an organisation, this can help employees feel more confident to talk about their mental health and then be able to access appropriate support to aid their wellbeing.

A recent report found that whilst many managers believe that supporting the wellbeing of their staff is a key skill, only 13% have received any training.¹

Providing mental health awareness training at all levels across your organisation can help provide a culture of support for anyone experiencing problems with their mental health. This provides a positive message that you are happy to invest in the wellbeing of your employees. Where relevant, you can book a separate group course for your Managers which means we can tailor the content accordingly and facilitate important discussions about how to support employees at your particular organisation.

We can also provide more in-depth training if you wish to create a network of Mental Health First Aiders across your organisation to further support your employees. This might include a mixture of both managers and employees. Again, if you wish to book a separate group course for Managers, this can help with important discussions about how to use the course learnings consistently across the organisation.

common mental health problem (such as stress, anxiety or depression) in any given week.

Mental Health for Adults

We all experience difficulties with our emotional wellbeing from time to time, however when these difficulties continue for a prolonged period of time and start to impact our ability to enjoy life, this might be considered a mental health problem.

Not everyone understands what it means to have a mental health problem. This can lead to stigma and discrimination. People who are experiencing mental ill health may be less likely to talk about this or seek help and support because they are worried about being judged.

More people than ever are getting help when experiencing a mental health problem, but this is still limited to only a third of those experiencing common symptoms.¹

Our adult mental health awareness training can help you gain a better understanding of common mental health problems, how to tackle stigma around this and how to support both your own and others wellbeing.

For a more in-depth understanding, our adult mental health first aid courses can provide additional information in supporting other adults who are facing mental health problems. This includes gaining confidence in how to support someone in distress, and what other resources are available for them

In 2020, one in six children aged 5 to 16 years were identified as having at least one mental health problem.

Mental Health for Children & Young People

It can be difficult for children and young people to understand the signs and symptoms of mental health problems, and they may feel unable to talk about this or ask for help.

A recent study highlighted that two thirds of young people could not find support when they first needed it. Three quarters of young people with mental health problems agreed that they had had to manage their mental health on their own when they couldn't find help elsewhere but very few felt confident in their ability to do this.¹

Our mental health awareness course can help parents, guardians and other adults in the caring and teaching professions to spot when a young person may be struggling with their wellbeing. It will give you the skills to have an open conversation with them and know where to look for additional support.

For a more in-depth understanding, particularly for those working with multiple children and young people, our mental health first aid courses can provide additional knowledge in supporting young people. Including how to build an action plan for each individual, and also how to take care of yourself in a supporting role.
